Theatre being put ahead of education

By Pamela Ferrari

To ensure that what has financially been halted, as it is now that as... renown, as forward goes, and has turned into one that... prepare, educate... a dream at Conestoga College's Doon campus...

see three page 3

SPOKE

Conestoga College, Monday, May 1, 1989

Pre-press graphics may get the ax under new college budget

By Hilary Steed

The college is destined financially within the next... of the college's budget... pre-press graphics program may get the ax, according to the pre-press...

see press page 3

Garbage in Doon's halls makes student image stink

By Lynn Quinby

And on sex . . .

Bryan Strang, Grade 354 president talks during play after a Mount Hospital

Story and more photos on page 5

Budget woes plague Conestoga

OPINION

Spoke

Free meals and a roof over my head — would you move out?

What a year!

By Trina Eder

(article text)

You Tell Us

What are your plans for summer vacation?

(responses with photos)

REAL Women funding threat to equality struggle

By Hilary Stead

In brief

April 25 board of governors

Scholarship set up

In honor of Garnet Minor, the Conestoga students who died in a car accident, there will be a scholarship being converted whenever possible by the college, to help fund some of it as a Minimal contest in the future. The second and third quarters will be made up...

Criteria announcement

Conestoga is scheduled for June 15. Those will be a meeting and an election of second term. The second and third quarters will be made up of those of it as a Minimal contest in the future...

"Final implementation is on hand. The college is in place," said the administration.

Peer evaluations stall new system

By Hilary Street

Hit and miss" faculty evaluations at Conestoga College will be replaced with a standardized system which will work out the faculty implementation.

The system which was developed was in the college but the old system too ill-conceived by the faculty, according to the technical committee.

"We will still be using the old system for this year," said the committee chairman Dan O'Brien.

"Final implementation is on hand," said the administration.

...year Center and the evaluation system was halted the college. Faculty Relations the attempt by the administration to have the faculty out on the road about the standardized system for instructor evaluation is needed...

Only the staff has information available and therefore. The attempt is done more systematically.

...system is complete...

Nursing applicants down for new three-year school

By R.H. Waterson

The diploma nursing program run by Conestoga College will be offered in new three-year format next September.

Expanding the length of the nursing program may mean that students presently enrolled in nursing choose to take the...

Stratford Federation of... ...more nursing could be...

Membership fee increases 40 per cent but still a good deal for Conestoga

By Hilary Street

A 40 per cent membership fee increase will take effect the strength of the college admin will reconsider the college with the... ...increase an increasing fee a student on the college enrollment.

The increase in the college registered to services that...

Industry support

...asked for a five per cent in pension credits for the...fund. Next 70 fiscal year, compared with the 40 per cent in the previous budget. All the money of the administration funds and support in the...

After reviewing past years of the college's scholarship, the question of quality and registrations was discussed...

Cheap trips

By Hilary Street

The college is available once...

Graphics student just wants to live life to the fullest

By Lisa Silvers

Summer slow down

York investigates essay business

By Lori Krushak

The college will conduct an investigation into the business of essay writing by students...

BRT visits studio

By Scott Morical

Increase in youth gang violence not a serious problem in Kitchener

By Scott Morical

ENTERTAINMENT

Doonsburys rock listless lunchers

By Bob Jones

Chris Stevens, lead singer

Conestoga's own DoonsBury rhythmns gives an ambiguous performance in the Atrium last week. The band did not seem to have an affect on the small lunch-time crowd.

Byron Shantz, USA's president of the original Who fan base, was there at the time. He and his fellow student have the same taste and had seen many bands over time. They wanted something more to do on a Thursday afternoon, the band continued mostly in Thursday mode, with the lead singer dancing on tables, and a number of student enthusiasts up and out of their chairs, and the rock.

Thursday afternoon entertainment included music by Doonsbury featured the rhythm and blues that the crowd seemed to really enjoy. The two-hour session got listeners but seemed to drag on the crowd.

Thursday afternoon's entertainment included music by Doonsbury featured the rhythm and blues that the crowd seemed to really enjoy.

Byron Shantz and Dave Jansen belt out John Cougar Mellencamp's Cherry Bomb

The band, with Shantz on guitar, Dave Jansen on drums, and Chris Stevens, lead vocal, played solid for the two-hour session.

Members of the band also entertained at the Corner Pocket Thursday nights, as well as some weekends. They performed at the March Break, open-mic performances, and then some in various parts of the Atrium.

Doonsbury, not to be confused with the Doonsbury comic strip, played an impressive set of music to a listless lunch time crowd.

Doonsbury belted out several songs by Bruce Springsteen, John Cougar Mellencamp, and many others. Not a particularly tight version of Cougar's tunes, Cherry Bomb, was.

The band, with Shantz on guitar, kept the crowd entertained, at least for those few who stayed for the entire session.

Dave Stevens, touring Doonsbury drummer and lead singer performs to a pumped up crowd

Conestoga design adopted as official Cambridge logo

by Trish Bier

Reduction and volume in the Cambridge area will be swept like all focus levels' needed area graphics pages. The design approaches in the winning logo submission by a second-year graphics student from Conestoga. Cambridge City Council has decided to adopt the design for official city use.

Originally the design was in the graphics course but turned out a winning entry based on the two-year development.

"It's great," Dave Kramer, second-year graphics student, said. "It's just exciting that my design has been chosen to be the official logo of Cambridge. May 18, projected the Doonsbury Artisan Show here.

The logo represents the focal point, the skyline of downtown Cambridge, the focal point for the city's heritage and development, and its recognizable heritage within the core. The design for official city use also includes the three development themes.

It took until City Council meeting in Cambridge on May 15 to approve the design. It took considerable time on Friday, and it should be available sometime in the late spring in Cambridge. May 18, projected the Doonsbury Artisan Show here.

CAMBRIDGE

CLASSIFIED

REVIEWS

Cronenberg masterpiece is a terrifying experience

By Pamela Fraser

Jeremy Irons plays twin Beverly and Elliot Mantle in the suspenseful Dead Ringers. (Good Images)

Stray Cats don't blast off with new album

By Lyal Hincliak

The Stray Cats seven eleven or rather pick the worst.

The world league, the heaviest songs that the group ever is concern and the Americans.

Americans hits "Stray Cat Strut" and "Rock This Town" and "Sexy and Seventeen" and others skip this one.

Personally when I heard the new album I thought it was a concept album of some sort. Clever also made a mistake dumb by calling it the greatest and called it "Blast Off." And it's certainly not a blast off type and it wasn't for me to a happy mood and made me wonder what happened to the trio.

The first and only remotely addictive songs to compare were the

Greg Is Kane hyper vocalize, something recklessness and reggae up beat and "Bring It Back Again" and "Gene and Eddie."

That only means that the Stray Cats gone back to their doowop roots and seeking with Americans, with a new and ambitious reach as they put forth effort in a newly rediscovered beauty recording their songs.

Unfortunately, they do lose in the direction of going a little too far, and will, and not a blast off ballad-oriented album cut "Nine Lives." Which is really not that impressive but it's soothing at least.

The songs that made up force and spin cuts offer a less haunting rock tune. "Gina" is a good cut, but the lyrics prove true to spin, and that is the real frustration about this album.

Overall they try their level best to make a good album and in the end accomplish the feat that is acceptable for recording, but they don't have it down to a science which is disappointing when you realize that this is a band who should really know better.

Hypnotic Gipsy Kings conjure haunting images

Recessing a 1987 album with much talent, the Gipsy Kings once again caught the magic and the music with their haunting melodies. Their second full release is titled Mosaique.

This album is harder, with more of the essential flamenco guitars at work. Expertly plucked and strummed, the Gipsy Kings are the quintet in their second debut.

Yes, they are real gypsies. All were born in France, and their music is the direct influence of their Spanish heritage. Most of their songs are written in a traditional Spanish and French dialect as well.

The music is flavored full and flowing with the lingering hint of the haunting rhythms. The songs flow beautifully leading the listener through a soothing visual journey. It is not far-fetched to imagine the old flamenco guitar resounding in the village square, with gypsies gathered around a camp fire. It's all there in the music.

Their music is wonderfully alive and worth the listen for anyone who craves the unusual. Indescribably, the music is hauntingly beautiful, and best captured with such melodic themes. Few words can describe the emotion and the feeling of the music as the Gipsy Kings build their repertoire.

The one thing missing from an album so full of the tropic flavor is a translation. It would be nice to know what they are saying but, on an album of this variety, the lyrics only serve as another instrument to accompany the melodies. And even if you don't understand a word, the music makes the message come through loud and clear.

Michael Keaton goes nutty in Dream Team

By Dom Jaela

If you want to see one of the best comedy movies of the year, then the new Michael Keaton comedy "Dream Team" is it.

Keaton plays an outpatient at a mental institution who is planning to go through therapy with a small group of fellow patients.

The movie works in part because Keaton is so good at being funny, and because the character he plays is so convincing.

Then think about it, which is funnier, a serious drama or a comedy, well, the comedy of course.

The movie is all about four mental patients, on a day trip to New York, with their doctor, and then the doctor gets into some trouble.

The four patients, including Keaton, go on a wild goose chase to find their doctor, and in the process have to deal with the real world which they are not used to.

This is a very funny film, which keeps you laughing all the way through, and a movie well worth seeing, so check it out.

The four patients are all so different, that they make a good team, and they become friends and learn to stick together.

This is one comedy that is definitely worth seeing, and the laughs are well worth the price of admission.

SPORTS

Tournament brings buddies together

By Eric Schmiedl

Photo by Eric Schmiedl

Kirkaldi bids, in numerous pitch off the ball hockey tournament April 20

No middle ground

By Pamela Pfund

Summer agenda popular

Scout jamboree promises to be learning experience

By Lori Machula

Larry McIntyre

College made a big mistake by suspending M&A program, says electrical skills teacher

by Julie Lawrence

Thirty-five employers are anxious to hire graduates from the electrical technician industrial maintenance program, and they left with no more than a certificate to their name. The electrical technician program was suspended by Sprite, Cummings College, now being forced to close by the administration at Sprite.

Newly hired, disgruntled with a suspension during the past few weeks, the program being suspended was an insult to the industry. And with no money to replace it he is forced to fend for himself.

These textbooks are so much out of date, and the students have been taught with the wrong equipment. The industry is changing so fast, he said.

Ready and all 15 of the 1988 graduates from the one-year program have found jobs in the field, a result which is not matched if these 15 students continue their education.

Tony was suspended its electrical technician industrial maintenance program in September last year after it discovered an electrical fault in a building, and soon after one of the technicians had been injured.

"Many changes came within a year that made the students realize the program was not able to carry on in the same manner," he said.

Word said the employees were disappointed to the fact they realized the program had been stopped because of money issues, as the industry just couldn't afford to keep it going.

But the employers and administration have also supported the program to maintain the standards they have come to expect during the past year when graduates were placed in the work force.

Every one of the 1988 graduates have also gotten the best jobs and positions they could ever have requested during the past year, he said.

Word said the employers were relieved they were able to hire someone of this caliber and the deans of having to keep them.

There were a few places at which they were placed and the closures of having to give a job for them all, and with a school in the field, were able to hire them.

Word says the employers were very satisfied with the students and the work they had done and they were all hired on full-time as soon as possible.

Something we've not been able to afford in the past few years because most of the college's funding goes into the computer programs, he said.

"Certainly we feel this is a big blow for the electrical industry and the employers demand skilled employees.

"And by being able to hire someone with a proper education, an electrical technician like these 15 students, who will be placed at certain jobs in the industry, it will benefit the field greatly."

According to Sprite, the former Dean of studies believes that the college made a big mistake by suspending the electrical program, and that the college had the opportunity to further education and that the college's interest in educating students gives a good impression.

Certainly I am disappointed by seeing this program go, but once again it was all a matter of money issues and had nothing to do with the students' academic accomplishments, he said.

Tony (circled) tops his students (pictured at below) and too big to blame out. He told the Sprite he was disappointed at seeing these 15 students come away with no more than a certificate.

This is the Sprite Dean with one of his graduates whom he believes should have completed the electrical technician program, rather than being suspended due to lack of proper funding by the college.

ECE students form different views on career

by Michael Allen Monroe

The Board of Education fought with program from Cummings College. Most of the students are still unsure of what their employment has been for them.

One of the students got all the help and preparation he needed from the Cummings College electrical program. He said he learned a great deal about electronics and computers and now he's ready to head out into the work field.

Other students are still unsure of what they want to do once school is out, and they are all in a state of confusion and uncertainty of where they are.

One of these students, a woman, had not a clue of what she wanted to do after school, that she felt her education had not prepared her for a career.

"I don't feel my schooling has prepared me for anything specific," she said.

"After all this schooling I still don't know how to operate many of the newer, more sophisticated machines.

"How would employers expect us to know how to work some of this equipment when we were never even taught how to use it during the course of our education?" she said.

Some of the students are content with the education they have had, and they feel they are ready for the work field.

"I am ready to take on any career in the electrical field," he said.

One of the male students said he was very confident and optimistic and he had no doubts about himself at all.

"I will take on whatever comes my way in the work force," he said.

Although it is completely understandable why some of these students are at a loss of what to do once they are out of school, the ECE program at Cummings gives the students a good education, and if they put forth the effort they will be successful.

ECE graduates from Sprite Cummings College look on as they are currently employed as technicians at Ramsay Farmhouse Corporation in Sprite.